

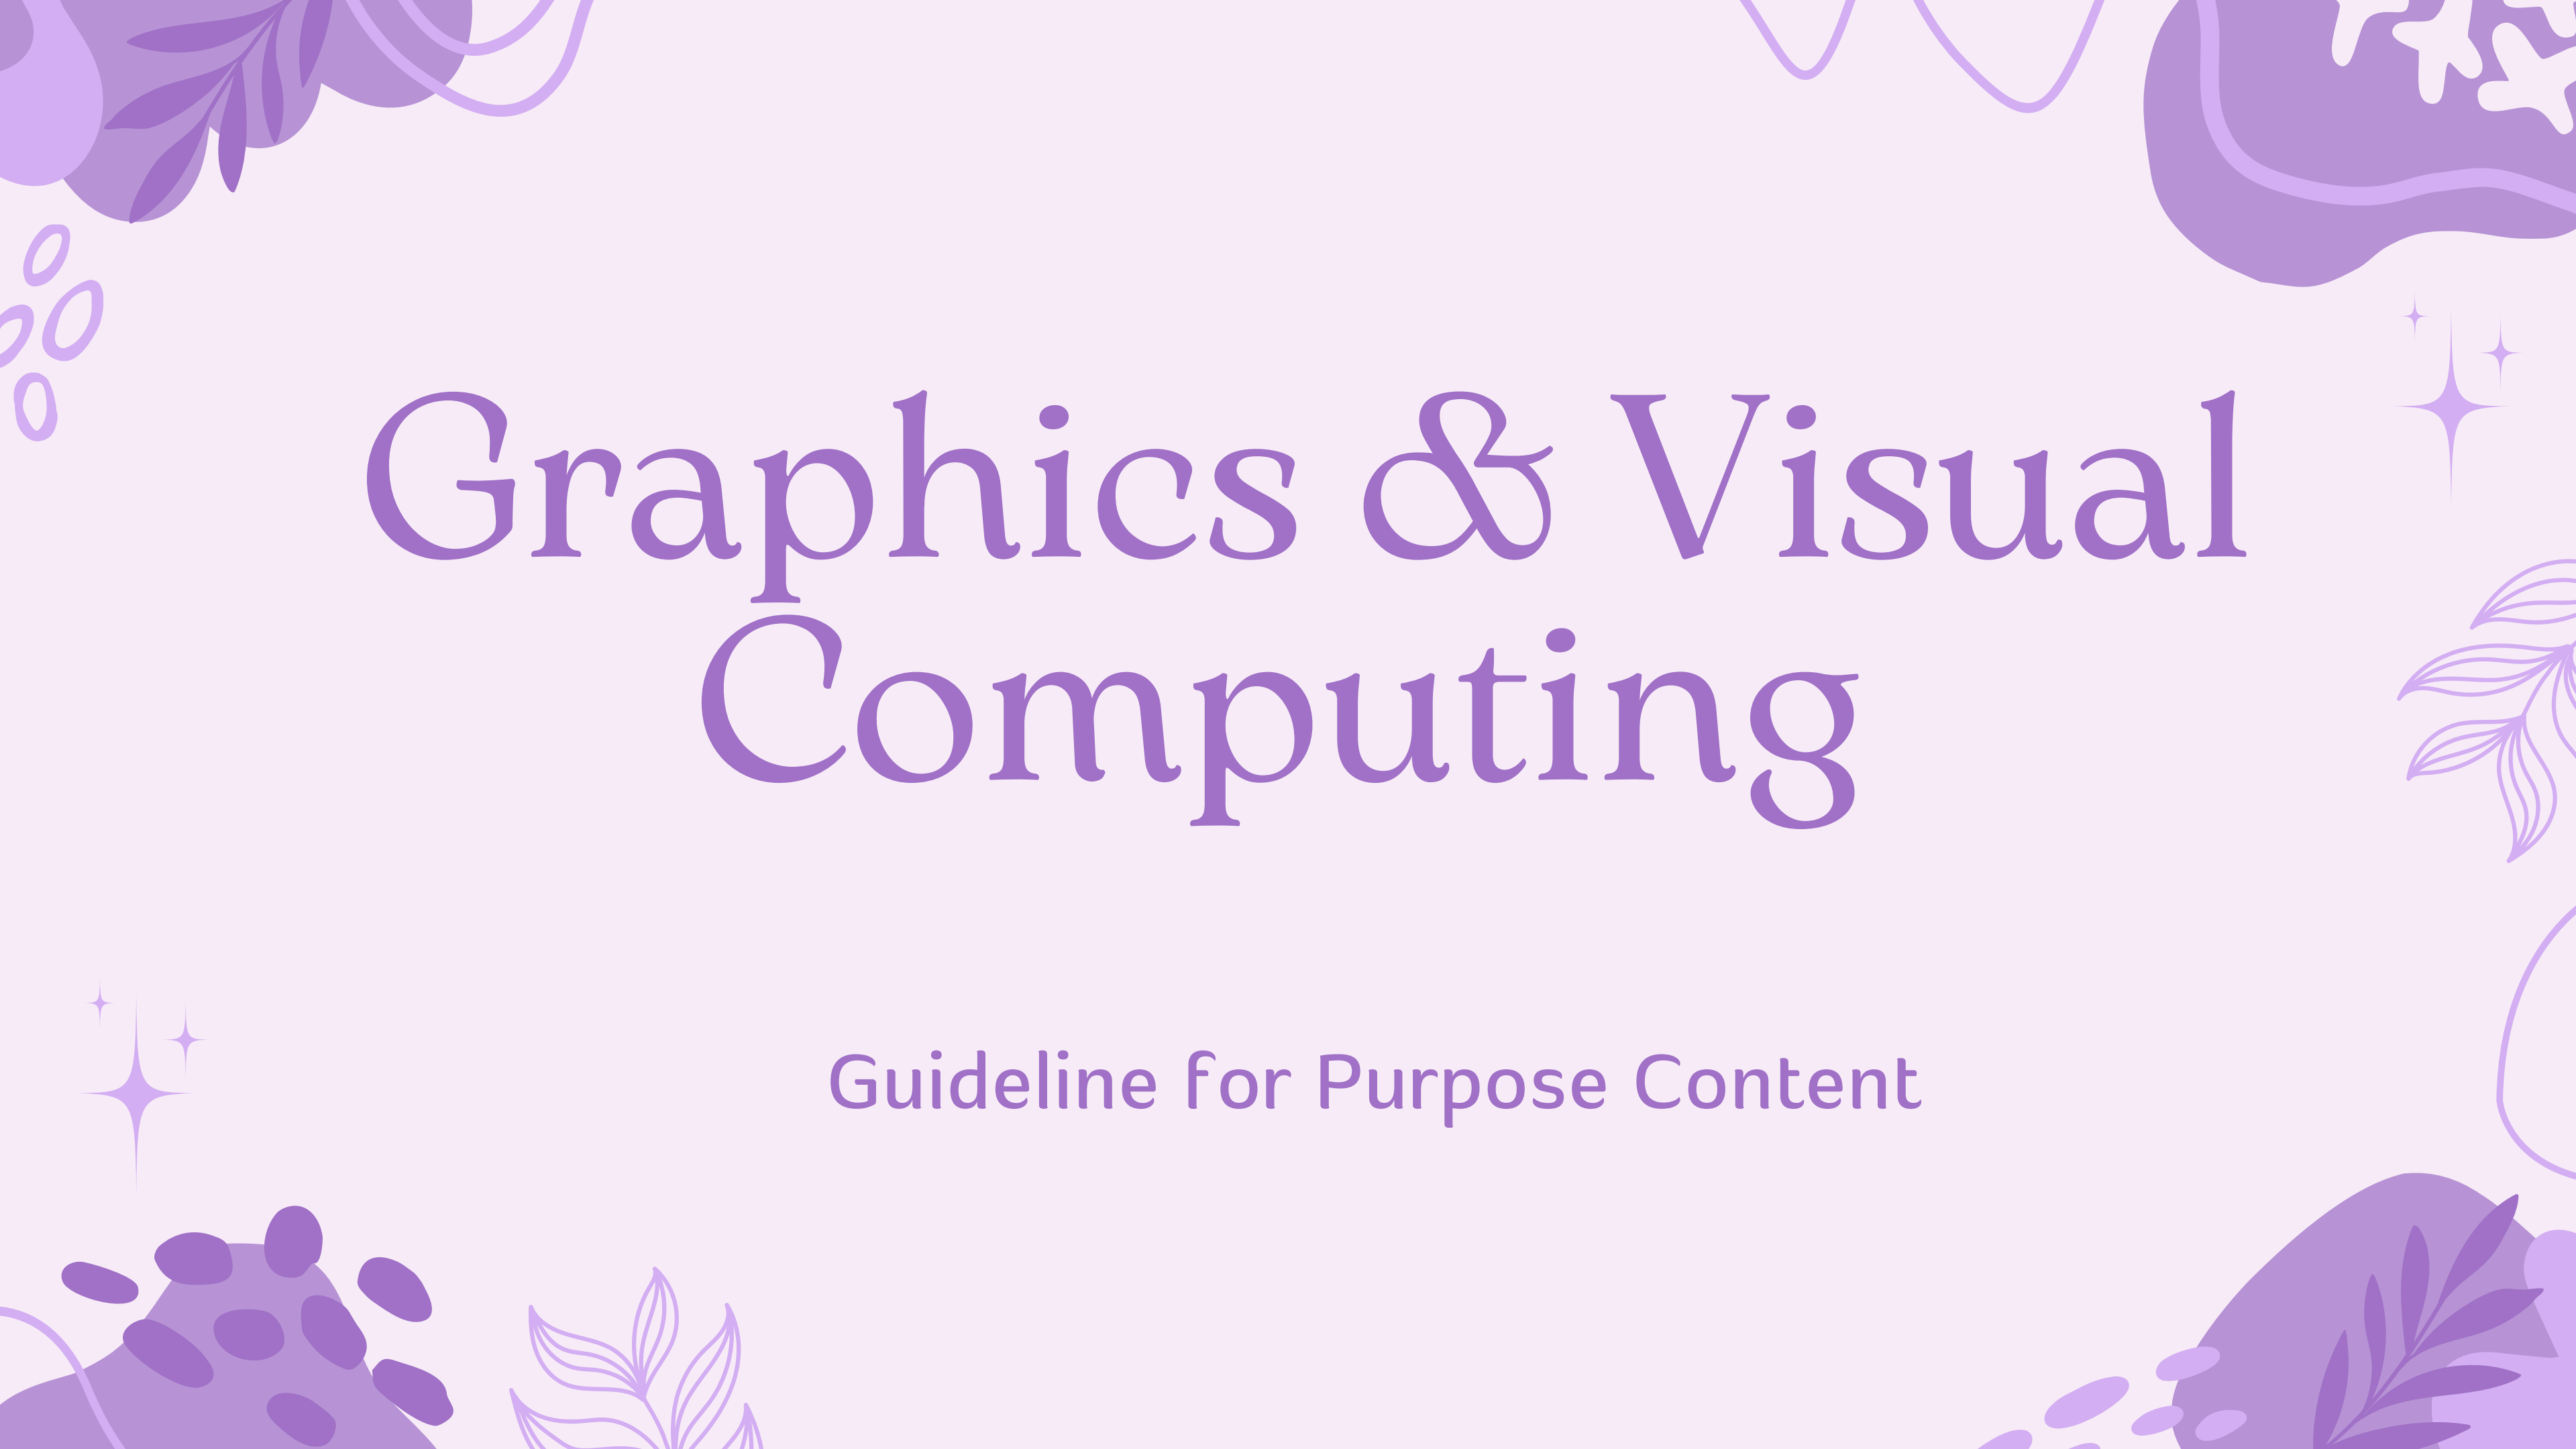

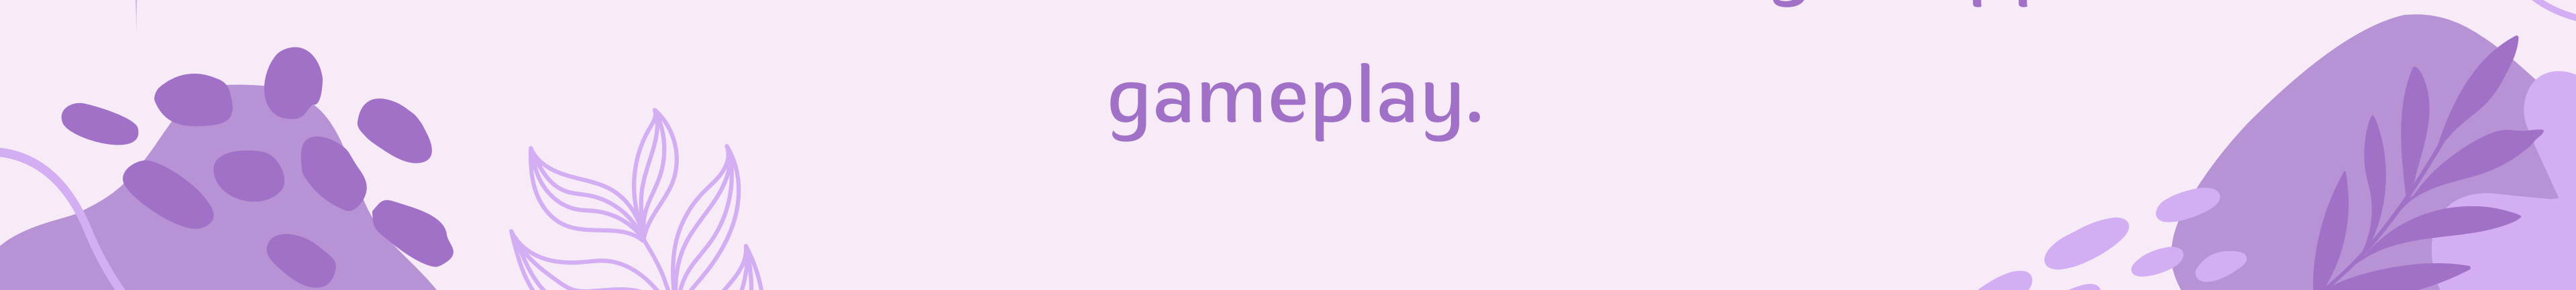

Graphics & Visual Computing

Guideline for Purpose Content

Content Guideline

This part required content and visual elements learners must present when designing or documenting a game development. Each section should demonstrate and apply how graphics, visual communication, and interaction design support gameplay.

Gameplay

- ▶ Short description of the game concept
Player role and main activities
- ▶
 - Core Mechanics - Movement, Interaction with objects, Combat, puzzle solving, collecting, etc.
 - Visual Representation - Screenshots, mockups, or concept art, Character and environment interaction diagrams

Gameplay

●▶ Graphics Elements

- Heads-Up Display - Player health, (Ammunition or resources)if needed, Map, Score, Objectives
- Main Menu – Start game, load game, settings, exit
- Pause Menu – Resume, restart, exit
- Settings Menu – Audio, graphics, controls
- Inventory Menu – Items and equipment
- Health Bars
- Scoreboards

Rules

- ▶ Rules should apply consistently throughout the game
 - What players can and cannot do
 - Limitations (health, time, resources)
 - UI elements showing rules (health bar, timers, score)
 - Tutorials, tooltips, or visual cues

Victory and Loss Conditions

- Victory Conditions - Completing objectives, Achieving a score, Defeating enemies or bosses
- Loss Conditions - Player health reaches zero, Time runs out, Failure to complete objectives

Interactivity Modes

- Type of Interaction - Single-player, Multiplayer, Cooperative or competitive modes
- Input Methods - Keyboard, Mouse, Touch, Game controller

Challenges

- Types of Challenges - Enemies, Puzzles, Time limits, Resource management
- Difficulty Levels - Easy, Medium, Hard
- Challenge Progression - Increasing complexity, New mechanics introduced

Structure

- Structure
- Flow
- Duration
- Availability
- Relationships - Player vs enemies, Player and environment interaction, Item and character relationships
- Progression - Level advancement, Skill upgrades, Increasing difficulty

The background features a light purple gradient with decorative floral and leaf motifs in a darker shade of purple at the corners. There are also small, multi-pointed starburst or sparkle icons scattered around the text.

Thank
You